Foreword

It is with great pride and enthusiasm that I present "The Thoughtful Pen - Imagination in Ink," a remarkable compilation of poems, articles, short stories, and essays crafted by the talented undergraduate students of Nagarjuna College of Management Studies, Chikballapura. This anthology is not just a collection of creative works but a testament to the vibrant imagination, unbridled curiosity, and remarkable skills of our students.

In today's fast-paced world, where information is at our fingertips and technology dominates our daily lives, it is refreshing and heartening to witness young minds turning to the timeless art of writing. Writing has always been an essential medium of human expression, a bridge connecting thoughts to words, dreams to reality, and ideas to action. Through this collection, our students have ventured beyond the confines of textbooks and examinations, allowing their thoughts and creativity to flow freely, creating a rich tapestry of diverse voices, themes, and perspectives.

"The Thoughtful Pen - Imagination in Ink" is more than just a literary endeavor; it is a platform that celebrates the spirit of our students. It encourages them to express their innermost thoughts, challenge norms, and explore new ideas. The works in this compilation are a reflection of their world — a world that is sometimes complex, often challenging, but always filled with hope and the promise of a better tomorrow. Each piece resonates with the author's unique voice, offering readers a glimpse into their personal journeys, thoughts, and dreams.

I extend my heartfelt congratulations to all the contributors whose works have made this anthology possible. Your passion for writing and commitment to excellence are truly commendable. I also express my sincere appreciation to the Department of English for their relentless efforts in nurturing these young writers and bringing this compilation to life. May this book inspire others to pick up their pens, unleash their creativity, and share their stories with the world.

Preface

As the Principal of Nagarjuna College of Management Studies, it brings me immense pleasure to introduce "The Thoughtful Pen - Imagination in Ink," a vibrant collection of creative writing by our talented undergraduate students. This book represents the culmination of months of hard work, passion, and dedication by our students, who have boldly explored the realms of fiction, poetry, and non-fiction to give voice to their thoughts and experiences.

This anthology is a reflection of our institution's commitment to nurturing creativity, critical thinking, and effective communication among our students. In a world that often demands conformity, we believe in fostering an environment where students are encouraged to think independently, challenge existing paradigms, and express their ideas with confidence and clarity. "The Thoughtful Pen - Imagination in Ink" is a testimony to this belief. The diverse range of genres and themes explored in this book highlights the breadth of our students' interests and the depth of their understanding.

I would like to extend my gratitude to the Department of English for their dedication in guiding our students throughout this journey. Their mentorship has been instrumental in shaping this anthology into what it is today. To the student authors, I say: your courage to express yourselves, to explore new ideas, and to embrace creativity, is truly inspiring. This collection is yours, a piece of your legacy at Nagarjuna College of Management Studies.

It is my hope that "The Thoughtful Pen - Imagination in Ink" will not only be an enjoyable read for all but will also serve as a catalyst for thought, discussion, and further creativity. May it ignite the imagination of many and encourage others to find their own unique voices.

Your Smile Kills Me....

Your smile kills me,
The way you see me.
We speak through our eyes,
Our love never lies.

The little time together:
Realized the attachment of the other,
Which doesn't seem to be any bother.
Our school days passed,
And the beautiful memories surpassed.

Though we are separated,
For our future life,
You are the only person,
I need in my whole life.

I'm afraid of losing you,
Even though the chances are very few.
I can overcome all fear
When you are near.

My life was full of darkness,
And you were my only spark.
I can live anywhere,
With you by my side.

The important day has come,
To move into your home,
And finally, we are married now.

In The Cradle of Dreams

I found my sanctuary, serene.
Asleep, I become a poet of my dreams,
Painting the world in moonbeam streams.
In the silence of slumber,
I dance with the stars,
A celestial wonder.
My dreams in silence breathe,
All idealistic with illusory splendours.

In the realm of dreams,
My spirits roam free,
Where wishes are granted for all to see.
I am the architect of my own destiny,
Living as I please in perfect harmony.
Here, peace reigns supreme and troubles
Fade away.

The Beauty of Wisdom

Every morning wake up with sweet hallos,
Only to raise superheroes.

Everything was black and cold,
Just wanted someone to hold.

Our life always seems hard,
But cries were always heard.

I know there is a good time,
Beyond that pain.

But pain consumes me inside,
Feeling good outside.

I close my eyes and I can see
A better day was long.

The painless time has not yet risen,
But I know, I shall wait for it.

The better day is not far,
It is in front of my eyes

AND, my eyes are waiting for it,
I hope that morning comes true

Relationship

Relationship is a noun,
It is like a bird.

Relationship is a pronoun,
Instead of “books” we call it “infinite love”.

Relationship is adjective,
It describes the feelings of the heart.

Relationship is a verb,
It gives work to the heart.

Relationship is an adverb,
It shows how the heart works.

Relationship is a preposition,
It links one heart with another,

Relationship is a conjunction,
It connects one person with another.

Relationship is an interjection,
When two heart are broken.

My Cute Lovely Daddy

Walk alongside me, Daddy,
And hold my little hand.
I have so many things to learn
That I don't understand.

Teach me the things to keep me safe
From the dangers of everyday life.
Show me how to do my best
At home, at school, at play.

Every child needs a gentle hand
To guide them as they grow up,
So walk alongside me, Daddy.
We have a long way to go.

To a Faithful Friend

Oh! My dear precious dog,
I must stop to pause
And look into your eyes
That render me feelings of love.

No matter what may come,
Through days of laughter and nights of tears,
You stand beside me through the years
With your gentle nuzzle and warm embrace.

Oh! Loyal hound with a wagging tail,
Your spirit free, you never fail.
You lift our hearts when shadows fall,
With a bounding leap, you hear our call.

Oh noble creature beyond compare,
Your love, a bond beyond compare,
In every bark, in every glance.

So here's to dogs, our cherished friends,
Whose loyalty will never end.
Your love and your faithfulness
True to the last beat of your heart.

Mom..., The Selfless Soul

Mom, is like a sun,
Who burn up herself,
To light up our life.

Mom, is like nature,
Who gives us everything,
But never expects anything for herself.

Mom is the one,
Who sells her jewels,
To make our life gold.

Mom is like a tree,
Who cuts itself down,
To give us timbre wood.

Mom is the one,
Who sacrifices her own meal,
To get us our meal.

Mom you are,
As great as “goddess”
As innocent as “child”
As warm as “heart”
As cool as “stream”
You are the... Selfless soul.

That feeling of missing
Our teacher's blessings
Bye bye everyone, that was such

My Dad!

How can I ever be sad,
When I have a dad
Who always makes me glad,
And is a happy dad!
Happiness to life, you add—
Oh, my dear Dad!

You taught me the letters
And the numbers better;
You are a great teacher,
Not just a preacher.
Meaning to life, you add—
Oh, my dear Dad!

You gave me faith in God,
To overcome every odd.
You meet all my needs;
Make me do good deeds.
Faith to life, you add—
Oh, my dear Dad!

You are always fair
And take very good care.
Many dads I have seen
Are never like you; they've never been.
Difference to life, you add—
Oh, my dear Dad!

You put yourself in my shoes
To know my feelings, you do;
With just my backpack on my back,
You put me back on track.
Purpose to life, you add—
Oh, my dear Dad!

Smile

There is a smile of love
And there is a frown of hate,
For it sticks in the heart's deep case
In which there are two smiles.

There is a smile of smiles
Which you strive to forgot on vain
And, when it once is smiled
There's an end to all misery.

There is a smile of love,
And there in a smile of deceit,
And there is a frown of disdain
But only are smile alone.

But when it's cold,
I would rather stay in bed,
But I love to stay in school.

My favourite subjects are craft, art, and English.
You can make stuff in craft,
You can paint in art,
You can learn in English.
We have lots of memories...

We have been waiting for the school trips,
We've been to the museum...
We have been learning decimals,

We are learning different languages like French,

Words of Love

We come from darkness and go into darkness,
But our life is colourful on this earth.
Yet there are people who live in darkness,
Right from the time of their birth.

They are deprived of light—
The light of kindness, love, and care.
Life for them is a terrible plight;
Darkness surrounds them everywhere.

Every man is born with untold wealth
Preserved in his heart.
He must discover this enormous wealth
And give it away.

Two words of love and consolation,
And some help that you can give,
Can bring many changes in them and fill their souls
With comfort and joy, making them alive.

Two words of encouragement and sympathy
Are like sparks that can ignite
The souls and make them smile with glee,
Filling the darkness with light.

These words are like a breeze
That comforts a weary traveler.
They have a magical power to ease
The pain of suffering.

We have a short time on this earth,
So let's change someone's unfortunate fate
And live life for all it is worth
Before it is too late.

“Love is when the
Other person's happiness is more
Important than your own happiness.”

In your womb I spent,
Receiving life from you,
And you brought me to the light of life.
My mother is the wonder of the world.

Lying in her lap, I don't need to fear,
For she gives me strength and security.
Oh! God, bless me and make me useful to the world.
Life may come and life may go,
But I shall love her forever,
For she made me what I am.

I love my mom,
My sweet mother.
She smiles when I smile
And cries when I cry.
She only gives and gives,
And expects nothing in return.

My Story So Far...

Aspired to the great,
Wasn't supported much.
A little girl they said,
Not even a chance.

Living in her dream,
Wanting to make it a reality,
Yet having low esteem,
Was a pure insanity.

Being full of fear,
Didn't know what to do.
Should she follow that career,
Or opt for something new?

No one knows yet;
It's only the start of her story.

If she believes in her glory.

Inner Voice of a Common Student

Jayasree A
I BBA

Every day I am surrounded by textbooks and notes, and my mind wanders over doodles in my sketchbook and little origami creations. I find joy in doodling and origami designs. But I set aside my interest due to elders' and relatives' words toward my interests. They say that they are useless and that I will have no future with these rough sketches. They told me to pursue engineering, medicine, or law because they have a good future. But they can't see the future through my doodles and origami. So, I kept away from my interest for a little time but sneakily enjoyed my sketches during free time.

Every day, coming to the classroom from my childhood days feels like entering a battleground. Only front-bench students are praised and appreciated for little things, whereas the work of students at the back goes unrecognized and unnoticed.

I get to my study desk not out of interest but due to the expectations of elders and teachers, memorizing every long question and formula.

Schools and colleges are meant for little moments of enjoyment. There are very few that a common student like me remembers. In the room of employees, many days I walk to the classroom with fear. I walk on eggshells due to students. But count speaks the inner truth. Just after the semester, it's like loads of work for students. But I can't speak the inner truth. Just after the semester, our assignments go into scrap like waste. We do lots of research, gather information from various sources, and present it well in assignments and presentations. But only some students' work gets recognized. All efforts of common students just go to waste, as always expected.

I just like to enjoy my free time, but there is no such thing. There is lots of work to do, assignments and presentations to complete, and competition to get ready for.

I just like to go on trips and enjoy origami decorations, doodle in sketchbooks, and explore new designs to draw in my sketchbook. I would like to get away from my elders who tell me not to play with those coloured papers, sketchbooks, and rough drawings. So, I just came to complete the course I started. But I would also like to pursue my passion. But everyone says there is no future and discourages me. These are the unspoken true words of mine. Neither my parents nor elders understand these unspoken words. The life I am leading is just like a puppet show being played by my elders, relatives, and their words.

Why Are Students Nut About ‘BRANDED STUFFS’?

Bhavani K G
III B.Com

Hey!!!

Do you have a Fastrack watch, Eyewear goggles, Adidas shoes, Nike T-shirt, Pepe jeans, Puma wristband, Reebok college bag?

Friends, all of us know there are some branded companies which we are all nuts about. If we see in colleges, these things are quite common. Why do young stars go gaga over wearing them? I really don't know... But it is true that just for a label, students are ready to invest thousands of bucks. If they walk right along the corridor, it feels as if branded companies are moving. These days, students are crazy about the things which are being shown in the ads.

As soon as they watch it, they are even ready to go to metropolitan cities in search of it. Both boys and girls feel that they are superior to others with those branded stuff and everyone wants to look at them. Is it worth paying just for that attitude? Are we foolish to look at them?

Let me tell you a story that suits the latter situation... Once there lived a king happily in a big kingdom. But his father was suffering from diseases. The priests asked the king whether he could get them fruit for a yagna. So the king went into the forest nearby. He searched for the fruit for days and weeks but did not get it. Meanwhile, he saw a hut near a beautiful river. Besides that, animals adding to the beauty of nature were absolutely charming!

The king approached a Swamiji who lived in the hut and said, “Swamiji, I need a special fruit which is seldom used in yagna. And I need it at any cost.”

Swamiji got an idea and he straight away took the king to his garden. He showed the kinds of fruits and herbs which were grown over there. The king found his fruit and felt very happy about it.

Meanwhile, he saw Swamiji’s daughter who was pretty and good-looking. He was attracted by her beauty. He was even interested in the animals. All those beautiful animals, Swamiji’s daughter, and the picturesque nature did not allow him to go back. Without Swamiji’s permission, he took his daughter and animals to his place. After they went away, Swamiji was very sad as he had lost his daughter and animals, but the foolish king did not realize the purpose of going there because he had forgotten the fruit he was searching for.

Likewise, we have all come to college to search for fruit, not for girls, boys, brands, and other stuff. We have come with great responsibilities. If we talk about great men, they were not behind branded stuff. The perfect answer is NO! Our parents sent us here with great responsibilities to get rid of vice and become the wisest.

In anticipation of wise friends, this is your friend!

“Kaboom”!!! (There was a huge explosion)

“Medec”!! “Medec”!! (Radio frequency sound)

“Come in, Roger,”

“Come in, Roger,”

This is the company commander, Roger.

“Send in the medical team,”

“I repeat, send in the medical team.” (Suddenly, radio tweaking sound)

I opened my eyes. There was absolute darkness, some murmuring and whispering sounds around me, and suddenly a heavy bass full voice I heard: “Major, are you alright, Major?” Major! Suddenly I fainted.

Hi, I am a Major. I am Murphy, British Armed Forces. I was posted at the coastal allies of Turkey, then under Ottoman rule, along with my company. It was the time of the First World War. We were part of the Union Allied Forces. The coastline was full of scattered blood and bodies after that explosion. I was shifted to the nearest base camp. In that explosion, I lost my eyes, and with them, my whole life.

I regained consciousness and the doctor asked me again, “Major Murphy, are you alright?” I nodded my head. “Major, I am Dr. Kal. I was the one who examined you. You have severe injuries, and we are sorry to inform you that you have lost your vision,” he said, his voice very low.

Then the door opened, and Col. Jordan Murray came inside to see me and informed me about my future proceedings after discharge. After my discharge from the base camp, I was given an imposed retirement, along with an apartment on the banks of the Thames River in North London, a retired dog, and a radio with a tuned frequency.

The days passed with two retired fellows and a running radio. One day I heard a news report on the BBC about a free eye check-up. After listening to that news, I rushed to my destination with my dog named “Shepard.” At the medical check-up camp, I was told I needed surgery that might restore my vision. I used all my pension to afford the surgery, but unfortunately, only one eye was cured. For me, it was like a boon. Over time, I adjusted to this one-eyed world. By just sitting idle, I was not able to live my life to the fullest.

One day, when I was walking down the streets, I heard about an underground shooting tournament where the winner would be awarded 1000 pounds. As I came from an army background, this opportunity excited me.

Soon after returning from there, I picked up a revolver and started practicing in my yard. It had been ages since I last aimed. The only hope or purpose of my life seemed to be slipping away. But I didn't give up. I started from scratch, took my shot, and won the tournament. I earned the name ‘THE EYE.’

Man Of My Dreams

Punith Raj V

I still remember when I was in 5th grade, that was the first time I saw this man on television in the movie “Aadhi.” It was then that I developed an interest in acting after watching the film. He is Jr. NTR.

His full name is Nandamuri Taraka Ramarao. He is the grandson of the legendary actor Senior NTR, who was once the Chief Minister of Andhra Pradesh. Jr. NTR was born on May 20, 1983. His parents are the late Nandamuri Harikrishna and Shalini. He made his debut as a child artist in the movie “Brahmarshi Vishwamitra” in 1991, which was directed by Actor NTR. He made his debut in a lead role in “Ninnu Chudalani” in 2001. In a short period, he gained a huge fan base due to his acting skills, grace in dance, and other talents.

The reason why he is my man of dreams is not only for his acting skills but also for his respect and love towards his fans. What I admire most about him is that he ensures his fans reach home safely after every event he attends. He treats all women with the respect he has for his mother and makes time to greet every elderly person. Despite his name and fame, he remains down to earth.

I admire him so much that I have decided to become an actor myself. From the age of 11, he has been a significant influence on me as an actor. My biggest dream is to share the screen with this actor at least once in my lifetime. Although I do not have support from my parents, I have been tirelessly working towards my dream.

Jr. NTR is not just an actor; he has been an inspiration to many young people. His dedication, humility, and genuine care for others set him apart from many in the industry. I am proud to be one of his admirers and am motivated by his example to pursue my passion for acting with the same fervor and dedication. His influence continues to drive me forward in my journey, and I hope to make a mark in the acting world just as he has.

Divorce Destroys

R A Neha Bai
I BBA

Who said marriages are made in heaven?

Then what about divorce!

You are reading my story. So, let's begin. It was my happy twenties when I was the prettiest girl among my batchmates, always happy and chill. Soon after, I met a boy who was good-looking and smart. Very soon, we became friends. I didn't know how it converted to love; I had feelings for him, and I came to know that even he had feelings for me. We lived together before marriage. Then we both got married. I felt butterflies in me. I thought I had met the love of my life, and soon every day seemed much happier with him. He was my sun and moon, rain and shine. A year after, I came to know that I was pregnant; my feet weren't on the ground. We were living happily ever after as my baby grew inch by inch. I felt that I was in the clouds during the whole third trimester. There he was, my baby, the mini carbon copy of him. Life seemed to be brighter. But the dark side of my life began when we both had arguments, which piled one over the other. Slowly, they had major effects on our lives.

He no longer wanted to live with me. He actually wanted a divorce. I was shattered by hearing that; my feet slipped to the ground. No thoughts were processing in my mind. My heart was ripped apart, broken. And later, after all these years, the actual end came. My marriage was about to break. I went numb; the ties in my heart were cut. The court approved our divorce, and then officially, physically, and psychologically, I was separated from him.

“Memories sting endless pain, past cruelty’s fling. The heart song it does sing.”

Once, I was over-loved and then lost. Call me an old soul or a daydreamer. I believed in fairy tale endings, not my marriage ending.

I slipped into depression even though I knew my husband wouldn't return. But God's plan was something else. I was only alive for my son, who was a reflection of my husband. I fell in love again, but this time with those little brown eyes which only cried and laughed for me. The pain inside me broke me every time; I was bleeding and healing at the same time. I knew that now I couldn't have my husband again in my life. So I started to gather myself, wiping my tears. My son doesn't remember his father because I was the one for him. This is not the story of a divorced woman; this is the story of a lioness in a bird's cage, but I was not where I should be.

“Through fields of grass and flowers, my laughter echoes, pure and bright.”

Exploring Nature with Friends

Nikhil A
I BCA

Memories to cherish for a lifetime! The day my friends and I decided to plan a one-day trip, we discussed for a long time and decided on the destination, "The Blue Mountain," which is nearby KGF (Kolar Gold Field).

We started here at three a.m. in the morning, reached there at five a.m., and started trekking with 'adventures'. We were five members, and one among us played songs from the Bluetooth speaker which he brought, and we went on climbing with enthusiasm.

We went on climbing the mountain. In the middle of the mountain, we stopped because there were big rocks on the way that blocked us. That's where the real thrill started.

We brought a rope, which we threw onto a big branch and started holding the rope and climbing. We stepped on the rock; the rock was very muddy, though we managed to climb it with adventurous thoughts in mind.

The more we climbed the mountain, we faced many obstacles on the way, but we managed to climb with 'spirit'. At last, we reached the destination with 'unforgettable' memories and 'experiences' we faced on the way.

That was 'worth' climbing the mountain. We saw the ‘sunrise’ between the clouds. We enjoyed standing on the mountain, feeling the clouds. “Everything was worth climbing.”

On the mountain, looking at the sun surrounded by clouds was such a joy. The mountains have eighty percent fresh oxygen. We felt like standing in heaven, feeling the beauty of nature, enjoying the fresh air, and hearing the music.

The best experience we ever had was climbing a mountain with thrills and adventures. Everything was worth it after reaching the destination. Unforgettable memories with friends for life, we experienced the beauty of nature. I felt my imagination was a hundred percent true after experiencing it.

Mountains are heaven; they have some kind of peace in them. In a word, mountains are “peace.” With no work pressure, stress, nothing, just “peace.”

Thanks For Always Being My Anchor

Bhuvaneshwari M
II BCA

I was a struggling student during my schooling, with zero knowledge of studies, sports, and other activities. As a result, everyone teased me, saying that I was useless and that I couldn't pass any subject. One day, when I was in 8th grade, there was a parents' and teachers' meeting where my class teacher mentioned that I might fail in the board exams. On that day, my father told me not to lose hope; every woman is trying to be independent. Chase your dreams and show them your worth. From that day onward, I changed my life. Now, I am one of the top students in my class.

This is my short story that changed my life. For every girl, her father is a hero because he can do anything for his daughter. A father is the one who always thinks about his children's growth. When I completed my PUC in the science stream and received good marks, I took the written CET exam as well but did not score well. My father had a dream that his daughter would become an engineer, but I didn't get an engineering seat in the best college, so I got confused about my career. After that, my father's friend suggested that I pursue a BCA (Bachelor of Computer Applications) as it is similar to engineering. So, I chose BCA for my studies. My father not only encouraged me in my studies but also in everything he could. He taught me how to ride a bicycle, bike, and even a car. He always tells me that in the future, I should not depend on anyone. Be a successful woman. Be a good woman in society so that every girl can learn from you.

My father always said:

1. Believe in yourself.
2. Respect elders.
3. Don't get angry easily.
4. Think creatively.
5. Help the poor.
6. Be cultured.
7. Take the blessings of your parents and God before doing something new.
8. Be a good woman in society.

Whenever I go to write an exam, I never enter the exam hall without my parents' blessings. This way, I can score good marks on the exam. Every father should think that their daughter is like an angel. He is my anchor.
Love you, Nanna.

The Beauty of Friendship

Friendship is a beautiful thing in life, like having a “treasure chest filled with love, care, happiness, and memories.” But what exactly is friendship, and why is it so important?

At its core, friendship is a special bond between two or more people who care for each other. Friendship is a relationship built on trust, love, respect, and mutual understanding. “Friends are there to help you through thick and thin, with a listening ear, a comforting hug, a shoulder to cry on, and words of encouragement when you need them.”

Another aspect of friendship is “sharing and understanding” with each other. Friends stand by us to share our happy moments and love, whether landing a new job or spending a simple day together. Hanging out with friends makes you feel happy. Friendship is not only about being together in happiness but also about being there in tough times to support each other. The way they lift you up from difficult times or remain a part of your life during challenges is what true friendship is all about.

Friends help us in difficulties; they show “empathy and reassurance” and remind us that we are not alone. From late-night movie nights to parties or late-night conversations, the time we spend with friends are very cherishable moments. In essence, friendship is a beautiful tapestry of kindness, love, and understanding. So, lead a happy life with your true friends.

Friendship also involves growth and learning. True friends challenge you to be your best self and offer constructive feedback to help you improve. They celebrate your successes and support you through failures, providing a safe space for you to grow. Friends encourage you to pursue your passions and stand by you as you face life's obstacles. They share their wisdom and experiences, enriching your life with diverse perspectives. This dynamic exchange strengthens the bond and deepens the connection, making friendship a pivotal part of a fulfilling life.

Friendship is also about accepting your pal the way they are. Thus, there is no fear of judgment or criticism. Situations that we cannot share with our family can be shared solemnly with our friends. Lastly, I conclude by saying in the last paragraph, "Have a true friend to achieve success in life." Cherish each and every moment with joy and happiness. "Friendship is a treasure, which is more valuable than gold or diamonds."

The World Without Colours

Chandu Y S
III B.Com

We cannot imagine our life without colours; the whole world would look idle and unoccupied. Imagine a world without rainbows, sunlight, and nature; it's just insane without colours. The world without colours looks empty and unhappy. We cannot imagine the autumn season where the old trees shed their leaves and give rise to new leaves.

We eat food based on its colour. If the food has no colour, we don't feel like having it.

Not only the world or the surroundings, but we should also make our lives colourful, with a lot of grace and enthusiasm. Adding more colours to our life makes it special and pleasant.

Life without colours cannot be imagined; the world without colours would be unimaginable. Think of fruits, vegetables, chocolates, plants, birds, animals, etc., which have colours. We can't just imagine our life without colours.

Each thing or organism has its own colours for the purpose of identification; without them, we cannot guess anything that exists on Earth.

Imagine a chameleon, which changes its colour very often according to the surrounding environment. A chameleon is known for its colour; without colour, it looks uninteresting.

Without colours, we cannot identify birds, animals, and snakes. It makes it very difficult to name the bird or to see which snakes are venomous and can harm humans.

In our daily life, we wear a variety of clothes in different colours of our choice, and colourful cosmetics add to our beauty. These things make our life more enthusiastic and colourful.

Imagine kindergarten children who are obsessed with colours in their drawing books. For them, colours play a dominant role in their lives, making them happy.

Each colour has its own importance and meaning. The three colours, i.e., red, yellow, and green on the traffic lights, reduce traffic and help in easy navigation. The festival of Holi is incomplete without colours. Diwali is said to be the festival of light. Diwali without crackers is incomplete. Thus, each colour has its own significance, and each colour plays a very important role in our daily lives. The world without colours is unimaginable.

The God of Cricket World

The story is about a modern-day cricketer and legend of our country. It begins in the capital city of India, Delhi. There is a small, happy middle-class family living on a small street: a father, two sons, and one daughter.

It is a match between India and Australia (AUS). Unfortunately, India couldn't chase the target set by Australia and lost the game. The father and the younger son were watching the match. The father was very disappointed by the result, and even the son couldn't bear to see his father so upset. So, he decided to play cricket and showed promise in the game.\

One day, a neighbor observed the boy and suggested to his father that he should join a cricket academy. Despite their financial constraints, his father enrolled him in the best training cricket academy. After a lot of hard work, the boy was selected to play in the Ranji Trophy and made his debut against Karnataka. In that match, wickets were falling for Delhi, and the boy was fighting alone. At the end of the day, he was unbeaten with a score of 40*. The boy was very happy and went home. That night, his father experienced severe pain in his chest, and...

His elder brother took their father to the doctor, but unfortunately, he did not survive. The next day, the boy decided to play cricket with renewed determination. He scored a century against Karnataka, leading Delhi to victory and earning the Player of the Match award. This marked the beginning of his journey as a great player and demonstrated his dedication to cricket.

Following this, the boy was selected for the U19 Indian team and became the captain. He led the team to victory, making him the first captain to win the Under-19 Cricket World Cup in 2007. Although he was dropped from the Delhi IPL team just before the IPL, RCB picked him up for 20 lakhs. Since then, for the past 17 years, he has played for the same franchise. He made his debut for India in 2009 and was selected for the 2011 World Cup. He scored a century against Bangladesh, and India won the World Cup. He was also the Player of the Match in the Champions Trophy final in 2013, which India won. In 2016, he became the vice-captain of the Indian white-ball team and the captain of the Test team. He scored two centuries in one match and became the captain for India in all three formats. This man has broken many records in cricket.

He was the only player to be number one in all three formats. He has the most runs in IPL and the most runs in a single edition of the IPL, with 973 runs in the 2016 World Cup, a record that remains unbroken. He has also broken the record for the most centuries in ODIs and is close to breaking Sachin Tendulkar's record of 100 international centuries. He has 80 centuries in international cricket and 8 centuries in the IPL. The name of the player who has been ruling the cricket world for the past 10 years is Virat Kohli.

Labourers: "The Hands That Build our World"

Neha B Patel
II B.Com

In the bustling cities and quiet countryside, there exists an often overlooked yet vital group who shape the very foundations of our existence. Labourers are the silent architects of our nation. Behind every steel-toed boot and work glove are individuals with families, dreams, and personal challenges. They are the unsung heroes of progress.

He is a person who drives our expensive cars but usually walks home. He is the one who guards billions but does not receive his salary on time. Sometimes, the person who delivers your pizza on time goes hungry for a meal. The roof of the person who builds our big buildings leaks during the rain. The life of a labourer is a daily struggle against both physical and social challenges. Despite their crucial role, the life of the labourer remains invisible to the public eye.

Labourers are those who make rich people richer. They sacrifice their entire lives for their families and children, just to fill their stomachs with a three-meal diet, without any higher expectations. There are many children in our country who have had to abandon their hopes of further education or basic schooling due to financial issues. The hard work of labourers often goes unnoticed by many.

Behind the beauty of every monument, building, road, etc., is the sweat and hard work of labourers. There are many people in our surroundings who treat labourers as the least categorized individuals. It is important for us to come together and celebrate the hardships of labourers by respecting their hard work, offering recognition and gratitude, and addressing their financial conditions.

Let us all put our hands together to prohibit child labour and encourage children to gain education and participate in various activities through the proper utilization of government schemes. There should be no differentiation in the facilities provided by the government. Children of labourers deserve the opportunity to develop their talents and creativity.

Labourers, without concern for what others might think, engage in activities such as cleaning gutters, washrooms, and toilets. Financial status compels a person to do anything, whether it is good, clean, or dirty in today's world. Let us all respect their sweat, sacrifices, and hard work.

RCB VS CSK

It's a spectacular match between Bengaluru and Chennai, the knockout match. The time is now 7:30 PM, and the toss has been delayed due to rain at Chinnaswamy Stadium, Bengaluru. The fans are looking disappointed. It's 8:30 PM now. Stay tuned for the toss. At 8:10 PM, the captains are present. Faf has the coin; he tosses it, Ruturaj calls heads, but it's tails, and Faf du Plessis has won the toss and decided to bowl first.

He says there are no changes in the squad. Now it's 8:20 PM, and Ruturaj and Rachin are at the crease. Md. Siraj will bowl the opening over. First ball—OMG! Ruturaj is out (bowled by Siraj). What a start to this high-thrilling match; it's the skipper who has been dismissed. Later, Rachin and Daryl Mitchell continue to bat. They made 62 runs in the powerplay, and the score was 62-1. In 8.3 overs, Rachin was dismissed by Green, caught by OK. CSK are 78-2 now. Later, CSK continued to score runs. At the end of the 18th over, CSK's score is 170-5. Jadeja has been given out for obstructing the field. There are loud screams from the fans because Dhoni has come to bat. First ball for Dhoni—can we expect the helicopter shot? Siraj is bowling. Oh! NO, Dhoni has been dismissed for a duck (0 off 1). Siraj is celebrating, CSK fans are remaining silent, some are crying. The first innings ended with CSK's total score of 191-7. Rachin scored 68 from 38.

The second innings has begun. Kohli and Faf are at the crease. They need to chase 192 runs in under 18.2 overs to qualify. They got off to a brilliant start, and RCB were 92-2 at 10 overs. Du Plessis and Patidar have been dismissed. Now Kohli and Maxwell are controlling the innings. It is the last two balls of RCB's innings. They have 12 balls left, but if they want to qualify, they need to finish the match in 2 balls. Kohli is on 94 from 50, Maxwell is at the non-striker's end. Thushar is to bowl a crucial over. First ball of the 18th over—it's a four. RCB needs 6 from 1 ball, and Kohli is on 98 from 51. The final ball—Kohli smacks it to mid-on. Oh! No, it's a four. That's the end of the over for RCB. They will win the match but can't qualify for the playoffs in Chinnaswamy. The CSK fans are celebrating. But wait, it's a no-ball. Thushar has overstepped the line. Kohli is dancing; he completed 100 in 52, and now RCB needs 1 from 1 ball to qualify. MSD is scolding Thushar. Kohli is on strike. Thushar bowls a nail-biting yorker; Kohli pushes it to deep mid-wicket and runs. Oh, everyone is celebrating. RCB has won and has qualified for the playoffs. Kohli is shaking hands with the players. He scored 103 in 53 balls with a strike rate of 197.13.

Post-match presentations:

Virat Kohli (Man of the Match): "I'm happy to win the game. It's teamwork. Those who are talking about my strike rate will shut their mouths. We hope to win all our next matches.[He says, "Ee Sala Cup Namde"] "Thank you, guys."

Anchor to MSD: "Is this your last IPL season? "

MSD: "Definitely NOT".

Navodaya...!

It's an emotion of 4 colors: Aravali, Nilgiri, Shivalik, and Udaygiri. I'm totally lost in the memorable and beautiful journey called "THE NAVODAYA DAZZ__!"

MAY 20th, 2016

My father: "You got selected for the Navodaya entrance exam." [happily] He came running and said this. His eyes were filled with tears. This was my first achievement in my life. I started thinking about the journey which I wanted to begin in 2016.

JUNE 8th, 2016

An innocent girl, only 12-13 years old, who was far from the lap of her mother and father, stood at the gate of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Chikkaballapur, reading the slogan "Come to Learn and Go to Serve." It was June 8, 2016.

With so much excitement and expectation, I entered Navodaya. Everyone was moving here and there with a bucket, steel box (trunk), and mug in hand. The new students were with their whole families. I was also with my mother, father, and brother. Some boys and girls were kissed by their parents at the time of leaving. Our seniors came with us to the hostel and allotted the beds for everyone.

Around 4:00 p.m., my parents left, and I stood near the gate thinking about this central jail. My eyes were filled with tears. If I saw my mother, I would be convinced I couldn't stay without her.

JUNE 7th, 2016

The bell rang and knocked at my ears. We woke up at 5:00 a.m. to go jogging. After that, around 7:00 a.m., we went to the MP Hall, where everyone was standing in a group and making noise. Harshvardhan, the captain of Navodaya, came and gave the caution for prayer:

“Hum nova yugaki, nahi bharti...

Nahi arthi...

Hami Navodaya ho....”

This is our prayer song.

After the prayer, we went to the classes from 8:00 a.m. to 9:00 a.m.. It was a Kannada class, my favourite subject. In that class, everyone introduced themselves. At 9:00 a.m., it was breakfast time. That day, they served tomato bath, which was my least favourite from day 1 to the end of the Navodaya journey

After breakfast, we went to class in a line from 10:00 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. Classes were held after lunch. From 2:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m., was our resting time. Again, from 3:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., was remedial classes. At 4:30 p.m., everyone stood in line for a cup of tea and snacks. After tea and snacks, we went to the ground to play.

Someone came and asked my name. That made me smile. Her name was Shraddha. She was my first friend in Navodaya. Up to 9th grade, I didn't know how to speak Hindi. When I was in 9th grade, I got selected for migration to Madhya Pradesh. It was my first train journey, so I spent my whole 9th grade there. There, I got my best friend named Gowtham Nayak, from 9th grade till today. He is the one who believes in me. He is not only my friend; he is a brother from another mother. When we came back from Madhya Pradesh, we got one message from China: It was Covid Lockdown...!

Friendship Forever

Jeevan Kumar R
I B.Sc.

Friendship is not just a word that can be explained. It is a bond and an emotion. Friendship cannot be explained in words because it is a universal bond that is not chosen by God but by us. Friendship is something that starts at any age but is a pure bond that lasts. True friendship needs just loyalty, love, and care. There is a quote in English: “In true friendship, a person is free to share his feelings without the fear of being judged.” In friendship, gender doesn’t matter, whether girl or boy; there is pure love and care between friends. “When virtue becomes a reason, friendship exists for friendship; they love each other and appreciate each other's characters.” In friendship, there are fights, misunderstandings, and many more issues, but despite all these, true friendship doesn’t allow a third person to interfere in their matters.

There may be many people in the world who may not have a lover but will definitely have friends and true best friends. Now, the difference between a friend and a best friend is: a friend just asks about your problems, but a best friend stays with you until your problem is solved. There are many movies and stories related to friendship, but there are also many stories that explain the deep love between friends—whether two boys or two girls. Few friendships start in childhood, and few start while you are growing up, but whenever it starts, it is named friendship forever. “A friend in need is a friend indeed.”

ISBN: 978-81-959235-6-4

This quote is quite familiar to us, but it highlights whether we have a true best friend or a fake friend. We share our problems with our friends not because the problem gets solved, but because the burden on our minds gets lighter. Friendship between two friends is not a simple thing; it changes a bad person into a good one. Friendship can work miracles. Friendship that consists of care, love, and affection doesn't have an end because it is endless. Friendship can't be explained in words or sentences because it requires a deep understanding of love, care, and concern for each other. There is no bond in the world that is better than friendship. The freedom that friends get with each other is the freedom every human strives for.

Rome Was Not Built in A Day

Rome is a popular city in Italy. It's known for its history and remarkable archaeological sites. The phrase "Rome was not built in a day" teaches us a very important life lesson. Let's explore this lesson through a story. A long time ago, in the prosperous city of Bangalore, there lived two brothers named William and David. They were virtuous and quite fluent in English, rarely making grammatical errors. They aspired to be renowned authors, and to achieve that, they needed to start writing.

William believed in writing regularly, whereas David was impatient. No doubt he was an excellent writer, but he was not ready to put in the effort. On a pleasant day, William suggested David commence writing a story. David argued excitedly, and they both wrote a chapter every day. After two weeks, David announced he could no longer continue and declared that his book was complete. William advised him to write more, but David, being self-willed, did not pay attention. He sent his sample chapters to the publisher to get it published, and the publisher was impressed by his manuscripts.

However, when he sent his full book for publishing, the publisher was disappointed and refused to publish it because it was an incomplete book with just a few chapters. Although his book did not sell well, people appreciated him for his efforts, and some even said that

David was smarter compared to his brother. William, nonetheless, after two or three months, saw the glory of his book fade. David was still happy. After a year, William's book was published and hit the benchmark in the field of literature. The book gained global fame, and people started becoming friendly with William.

When William was called to speak a few words about his successful story, he quoted a true fact: “Rome was not built in a day.”

The phrase “Rome was not built in a day” teaches us a very important life lesson: whenever you aim big, you need to start working hard. Hard work, patience, and dedication help achieve what we aim for. If we are not successful in achieving something at once, then we need to try again and again until we triumph. We need to build willpower in order to achieve something big with continuous efforts, patience, and hard work. When an author paints a beautiful story, it takes feelings and real-life experiences to create realistic characters and narratives.

Concentration, planning, patience, hard work, and dedication are the keys to an author's success. Failure is a part of success, and surely, one day, success will come. Experts don't become experts in just days; it may take months or years for them to achieve expertise in a field. What comes easily is never appreciated, but what comes through hard work, patience, punctuality, and concentration will be more valuable and appreciated by everyone, remaining forever remarkable in society or history. This is how “Rome was not built in a day.”

Pathik, the boy who loves to travel all over the world, is from Kerala, India, a place famous for its scenery and greenery. Pathik has traveled to more than 20 countries. For him, a new day means encountering new adventures. He used to write down all his travel adventures and collect different memories through exploring the world. Pathik loved different cultures, foods, etc. He also loved photography and used to capture his memories through travel and images.

Chitra, the girl who loves art, painting, and sculptures, is from Kolkata, the city of art. Without traveling, Chitra used to depict beautiful places in her art. Chitra had loved art since childhood, so she pursued a career in it. She enjoyed painting nature, animals, and imaginary things. She painted art as if she had visited those places, even though she hadn't traveled. Using her art, she explored and discovered new things.

One day, after traveling, Pathik returned to his hometown, Kerala. He greeted his parents and decided to take some rest the next day. A friend of Pathik asked him to visit an Indian museum in Kolkata. His friend also loved art. Pathik agreed to visit the museum due to his friend's request. Chitra also displayed her art at the Indian museum in Kolkata. That day, they exhibited their portraits and artwork.

Pathik, after viewing the portraits one by one, stood near one portrait for some time. Chitra, who noticed Pathik, came over and whispered, “It is one of my favorites too.” Chitra had painted the beauty of Paris. Pathik asked Chitra if she had traveled to Paris, but she said, “No, I haven’t yet visited.” Pathik was surprised that Chitra had painted such an artwork as if she had been there. They began communicating with each other, sharing their experiences. Pathik shared all his travel experiences and images, while Chitra showed Pathik the world of art. They continued to discuss and became close.

Pathik, who used to travel, was following his path, and Chitra was focused on art. Because Pathik traveled, they had some chances to meet up, but they mostly did video calls. Pathik, after traveling, would show images and stories to Chitra, while Chitra, after painting, would send pictures of her artwork to Pathik. They complimented each other and enjoyed communicating. Eventually, Chitra also started traveling to cities, taking images, and painting them. Their artful journey continued in this manner.

One day, Pathik asked Chitra to travel to Paris with him. Chitra, who had dreamed of visiting Paris, agreed to Pathik, and they traveled there together. In Paris, they explored and discovered many places. The next day, they visited a museum where there was an artwork called “Beyond Embrace.” As an artist, Chitra understood the meaning of the portrait, which described [love and art]. She shared this with Pathik. Pathik, who loved Chitra, proposed to her in front of the artwork with beautiful words: “Let us travel together in the journey of art.” Chitra, moved by Pathik’s words, got emotional and accepted.

Pathik and Chitra, with the blessings of their parents, got married. They bought a house near the beach and spent their time happily. Pathik, who loved traveling, and Chitra, who loved art, continued their journey in a beautiful way by respecting and understanding each other. After marriage, Pathik and Chitra traveled together, and Chitra shared with Pathik about art and its importance. They continued their artful adventure, happily pursuing their passions.

RED, A BADGE OF COURAGE

Meet Isha, a 14-year-old girl who has joined a new high school. It was her first day at her new school, and she was nervous. Unexpectedly, she got her period in class. Her clothes were stained red, and she felt embarrassed and ashamed. The boys in her class teased her about the red stain on her clothes. Unable to bear the embarrassment, she cried a lot and ran to the washroom.

One of her classmates saw the situation, took a pad, and ran to Isha to help her. Isha did not know how to use the pad, so her friend assisted her. Isha thanked her friend for the help. As soon as the teachers learned about the incident, they sent Isha home.

When Isha arrived home, she felt ashamed and embarrassed about what had happened on her first day of school. Her mother noticed that Isha was sad, so she went to Isha's room, sat with her, and started explaining menstruation. Isha's mother said that menstruation is a common process in every girl's life and that there was no reason to feel ashamed or embarrassed. Menstruation indicates hormonal changes occurring during this phase in every girl's life. Every girl bleeds for about 5 days during this process. All the waste blood in the body exits during these 5 to 7 days.

Girls experience various problems during menstruation, such as stomach pain, body aches, tiredness, and mood swings. Resting for the first three days is very important as the blood flow is higher during these days. It's essential for girls to maintain a proper diet by drinking lots of water, eating healthy food, and consuming fruits. Spicy food should be avoided. Dark chocolate can help reduce period cramps. Pads should be changed every four hours to maintain hygiene.

Moreover, family support is crucial for every girl during this time of the month. It is important that all the men in the family are educated about menstruation so they can support and take care of the girl. Schools and colleges should also educate both boys and girls about menstruation. By listening to her mother's words, Isha learned that menstruation is a common process in every girl's life and there is nothing to be ashamed or embarrassed about. She hugged her mother and said, "Thank you, Maa."

The next day, Isha went to school and looked for her friend to thank her. After expressing her gratitude, she went to the boys who had teased her about the red stain on her clothes. She stood bravely in front of them and said, "Periods are common for every girl; there is nothing to be ashamed about. Every girl goes through menstruation, including your mother and sister. So mind your words, boys, and think before you tease girls." The boys felt remorseful for teasing her, apologized, and became good friends with Isha. Following this incident, the school organized an awareness program on "Pad Days." Both boys and girls attended it to learn about the importance of menstruation in every girl's life.

This incident in Isha's life underscores the importance of educating both boys and girls that menstruation is a common process in every woman's life rather than teasing them. We must help and take care of every girl during this time and respect every woman for all the pain they endure.

One Day Experience at Wonderla!

That was the first time we were going to Wonderla. I had not slept the previous night. The time had come, and we entered. We purchased the tickets and went inside. As we entered, someone recommended that we first play all the water games and then move on to the land games. Likewise, we planned to complete the water games first. There were a variety of water games. At first, I was a bit afraid as I saw that people were sliding down from the top. We would be sliding down as well. Initially, I felt afraid, but later I got used to it and felt thrilled. There were a lot of water games, so we came back to play the other games.

Then we moved on to the wave pool. It was enjoyable. The waves hit our legs and pulled us back through the water. We were sailing in those waves with a lot of enjoyment and fun. This way, we finished all the water games. By the time we finished the water games, it was around 12, so we had our lunch and moved on to the dry games. The games looked dangerous! First, we went for the dashing cars. As a young boy, I loved that game. Dashing into other cars was what I liked. We finished all the small games on land, and then we moved to the drop zone. Oh, man, that game was like hell. They took us to a height of 100 meters and then dropped us very rapidly. After the game, I thanked God that I was still alive. It was such a dangerous game.

Next, I went on a roller coaster. It was freaky! I enjoyed it a lot. Then we moved on to the giant wheel. We had to go about 20 to 24 floors to reach the giant wheel. That was scary too; going to the 24th floor and then looking down made me go cold. We finished the giant wheel and then moved on to the scary house. It was the first time I was visiting the scary house, and I was frightened. When we went inside, it still looked scary. After coming out of the scary house, we felt like we had come out of hell. It was already 6 p.m., so we left Wonderla. On the way back, everyone's face was filled with happiness, and there was a smile on everyone's face. That day will be remembered forever.

Life Of a Girl

Fiza Banu R
II B.Com

The life of a girl is fraught with uncertainties at all stages. Initially, when a baby girl is born, there is often disappointment among family members. The reaction is frequently, “Oh no! It’s a baby girl.” This reaction reflects the societal preference for male children, which unfortunately starts from birth.

In the early stages, the girl may not be valued as highly as her male counterparts. This discrimination is evident as she grows. Many families restrict girls from receiving an education, believing that educating them is unnecessary or even a waste. This view persists in some communities, where girls are often overshadowed by their brothers and receive less support from their own families. They are expected to conform to traditional roles rather than pursue their aspirations.

As the girl reaches adolescence, societal pressures intensify. The focus shifts to preparing her for marriage rather than fostering her personal growth. Her choices are often disregarded in favor of family decisions, leaving her with little control over her own life. She is expected to marry someone chosen by her parents, and her own feelings and preferences are rarely considered. The concept of marrying for love is often seen as a luxury rather than a reality.

After marriage, a girl's life often revolves around her husband's preferences and her in-laws' expectations. Her freedom and autonomy can be severely restricted, and pursuing a career or personal ambitions can become increasingly difficult. Many women are expected to prioritize family responsibilities over their own professional aspirations. This lack of support for working women further reinforces gender inequalities.

Motherhood, though considered a beautiful phase, also comes with its own set of challenges. As a mother, she may find herself sacrificing her own needs for the well-being of her children. Her role becomes a balancing act of managing household responsibilities while trying to support her family. Despite the sacrifices, she often lacks recognition and support for her efforts.

In all these stages, a girl faces discrimination and restriction. Even as she navigates these challenges, she shows remarkable resilience. Women continue to strive for equality and empowerment despite societal constraints. The journey from being undervalued at birth to becoming a pivotal figure in the family underscores the strength and determination of women. However, achieving gender equality requires a collective effort to challenge and change deep-seated societal norms. By supporting women's rights and providing equal opportunities, we can create a society where every girl can thrive without discrimination or limitation.
